A trip by Gianmarco Maraviglia/Echo

Milan will host in a few months one of the most important international events, the Expo2015.

It is not an easy city.

At first glance it is a cold city, inhospitable, unreadable, hidden.

In Italy it is considered the most dynamic city, the capital of work, fashion, design and economy.

People are always in a hurry, Milan is a fast city. You run for the office, you run to go on a date, to a meeting, you run to go home.

Millions of tourists come to Milan for Expo2015, and try to discover Milan using public transportation.

Trams, buses, subways.

In the frenzy of the city a few minutes spent in a tram are sometimes a few moments to get away, to think, to be alone.

Gianmarco Maraviglia, born in Milan, decided to tell his hometown. With a cell phone tells Milan through the relationship between the places, people and public transport.

A instinctive tale, dirty and non-linear, to give suggestions and sensations that can help you better understand Milan and the people living there.
