Militia Nr. 4

Roman is 26 years old, a former soldier who fought in Afghanistan. It is now at the head of a small militia made up of a dozen twenty-somethings, who patrol the streets of Kiev from midnight to dawn.

In a situation of substantial stalemate, the crisis in Ukraine is slowly becoming a war of positions, with more and more military.

Organized groups of pro-government mercenaries, called Tituskha, attack the protesters outside the Maidan Square, the heart of the revolt, and in the suburbs. The militias, such as the one led by Roman, day maintain order and security within the square, at night they're moving in compact patrols throughout the city, to identify and "neutralize" groups of Tituskha. Within the occupied palaces held true councils of war, briefing and training the techniques of hand to hand combat.

A scenario that is getting closer to civil war.
